Whenever replacing brake pads, along with inspecting the removed pad for indication of suboptimum wear patterns, thoroughly check the caliper boots for deterioration and replace if condition is defective.

Disc brakes regularly operate at temperatures of over several hundred °C and contaminated, sluggish or seized up guide elements lead to a limited functioning of the brake caliper and can have the following effects:

- Increased and uneven wear of pad and disc material
- Increased noise
- Inadequate or unbalanced braking behaviour
- Thermal overload resulting in disc deformation & failure
- Bearing and spindle damage
- Wheel-end fires in severe cases.
